

Parliament On Parade

By ALAN HARVEY

(Editor's note: Following is the fifth in a series of articles written for the Canadian University Press from the Canadian capital by Alan Harvey, sports editor in 1939-40 of "The Varsity," undergraduate newspaper of the University of Toronto and now attached to the Ottawa bureau of the Canadian Press.)

By Alan Harvey.

Ottawa, February 10. — (CUP) — Students at Canadian universities who are members of the Canadian officers' training corps or auxiliary training battalions recognized by the National Defence Department probably will be allowed to carry on as usual despite new reserve army regulations, it is learned authoritatively here.

One significant clause in the defence department's statement last Friday night announcing the new reserve army set-up reads:

"Service in reserve units will no longer exempt from compulsory military service men who are liable to call under the National Resources Mobilization Act."

As the C.O.T.C. and other compulsory military training units organized by colleges and universities are considered broadly as part of the reserve army, this announcement immediately raised the question whether university students would now be liable to call under the national resources mobilization act.

"Matter of Policy"

The query was directed to defence headquarters, where it was learned that the status of university students under the new regulations is a "matter of policy," now being worked out by the government and that an announcement clarifying the situation may be expected shortly.

But in other informed quarters it was said there is little likelihood of any change in existing arrangements between the universities and the defence department.

"I do not believe any change is contemplated in the present set-up," one military spokesman said. "We are getting good officer material from the universities and it would hardly seem logical to do anything that might interfere with this."

Another official belief was that universities would be drained of their best men if students now fulfilling allotted military training quotas as members of the C.O.T.C. or equivalent units were made liable for four months' compulsory military training and subsequently for service in uniform within Canada or its territorial waters as long as the war may last.

Older Men Wanted

New rules laid down for the reserve army imply at least two things respecting enlistments—that the reserve itself will be constituted increasingly from older age brackets and that more men may be subject to call for service under the resources mobilization act.

Voluntary enlistments in the reserve now are restricted to men under 19 and over 35, except for men unfit for service overseas or exempt from active service because they are key workers in war industry.

Thus, as things stand now, the only way a man between 26 and 35 can obtain a uniform is by enlisting for active service. The reserve won't take him and he's too old to be called under the resources mobilization act as it is applied now.

McGill Men Engaged in "Ops" in England

Students of All Faculties To Be Welcome at Hearts Hop

The forthcoming Hearts and Science Hop to be held February 14 in the Union Ballroom is open to all faculties with a special invitation extended to the Air Force unit on the campus and to the newcomers from Macdonald College.

The price is $1.10 per couple. Tickets are on sale now and may be obtained from Bill Gentleman, Fred Barton, or the Tuck Shop at the Union. They may also be obtained from any member of the committee: Steve Bross, Bob MacIntosh, Gordon Greaves, Jerry McGowan and Charlie Butterworth. Tickets will also be left at the Air Force barracks for those who want them.

The Esquires Orchestra will provide the music and dancing will continue from 9 p.m. till 1 a.m. Cokes will be on hand in the Ballroom for all desiring refreshment.

It was reported yesterday by Thomas Mulligan, president of the Arts Undergraduates Society that considerable interest in the affair has been evinced by the occupants of the Engineering Building. Mulligan emphasized, "The dance is open to all faculties. I wish to spike nasty rumours which have been floating around the Campus to the effect that the dance is to be an exclusively Arts affair." With great broadness of mind he added, "We shall welcome friend and foe alike to this important social function."

The dance will feature about 20 minutes of dancing in the dark which, we learned, was an innovation included in the programme only after great forethought on the part of the Committee in charge who desire to prepare McGill students for future war-time exigencies. Anyway, it sounds like a good idea.

After all, it seems rather brave of Dan Cupid to venture forth as Master of Ceremonies so soon after seeing his subtle arts so rudely dispensed with by Sadie Hawkins and her ilk. However, with representatives from Arts, Science, and all other faculties, plus the boys from the Air Force, he should find sufficient scope to bolster his somewhat shattered male ego. So don't discourage Dan—he is an interesting little fellow in his own way—and remember Saturday, February fourteen.

"Make this a rally cosmopolitan affair and take advantage of the Arts Invitation. The evening promises to be of the best, so get your tickets and join the throng," was the appeal issued by the Executive.

Dr. W. Penfield Will Give Talk

Pre-Medicals To Hear Noted Neurosurgeon

The Pre-Medical Society will hold its second meeting of the current term tomorrow at 5.00 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Union. Guest speaker for the occasion will be Dr. Wilder G. Penfield, Professor of Neurology and Neurosurgery at McGill and Director of the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Dr. Penfield came to Montreal in 1928 to become neurosurgeon to the Royal Victoria and Montreal General Hospitals, and has held his present position since 1934. Winner of a Rhodes Scholarship in 1914, he served as a doctor in France during World War I before resuming his education. Holder of degrees from Oxford and Princeton, his achievements have taken him to many of the world's great medical centres, where his research has been of prime importance. Societies all over the globe claim him as a member, and his reputation as a neurosurgeon is not confined to the North American continent alone.

Entries Wanted for Arts and Science Exhibit

Entries will be received in the "Forge" office in the Union for the coming McGill University Arts and Crafts Exhibit on Thursday and Friday of next week.

The exhibit which is set for the last week of the month will include drawings, models and photographs of architectural works, scenic and costume designs for the theatre, drawings, paintings, photographs, prints sculptures, and craft works.

Emphasis has been placed on balance and quality as an objective for the coming exhibit. Especially stressed will be design, workmanship and suitability of medium. This is the university's second arts and crafts display.

Dr. Humphrey Talks to IRC

Pan American Conference Topic of Speech

Professor Humphrey will address the International Relations Club tomorrow at 5.00 p.m. in the music room of the Union.

An authority on Pan American relations, Professor Humphrey has chosen the recent conference of Foreign Ministers at Rio de Janeiro as the topic of his talk. "This conference will be of major importance in the years following the war, consequently the students ought to

Reportorial Staff of Daily Goes 'Dashing Through the Snow'

The day is rapidly approaching when the McGill Daily will break its usual silence on such matters, and separate the good from the bad from amongst the ranks of its vast staff of reporters. Yes, tomorrow the Daily will publish the names of all reporters who have been invited to its long-awaited annual sleigh ride. All the potential instructresses from Macdonald College are invited to attend in the hope that many of them will use their proverbial intellectual genius to liven the columns of the paper.

This being a closed affair, the support of the one-day-a-week journalists is naturally expected, and, like all Daily-sponsored affairs, it will be something worth while attending. What could be more delightful than a two-hour sleigh ride to the top of Mount Royal except the bean feed and dance that follows it at the Union?

As for the girls from Macdonald, this is one of the first

Students Still Slow in Signing Annual Lists

The Annual Board announces that a poor response has been shown by the junior years in subscribing for copies of Old McGill, 1942. Let us remind you once more that the Annual is not for the Graduating Class alone. It is the most complete record of the year's activities which may be procured and not only should each student have the Annual for his final year, but also those for each of his years at the University.

The name lists are to be found conspicuously placed in all the various buildings.

This comprehensive survey of four years at College is something that will grow in value after your College life is ended.

Red Debaters Meet Varsity

Three Debates Will Be Held In Toronto

A triple header debate between students of Toronto Varsity and of McGill has been scheduled for this week. The debates will be held in Toronto, and the first of the series will take place tomorrow afternoon in Osgoode Hall. Representing the McGill Debating Union Society are Mervyn Weiner and Lloyd Henderson, who will uphold the affirmative side of the argument. The resolution to be contested by the Varsity debaters is, "Resolved, that the government should own and control all war industries for the duration of the war."

The second debate is scheduled for tomorrow evening, and the battle-ground for this second of the series will be Victoria College. The McGill debaters will again uphold the affirmative side of the argument, which will be "Resolved, that the victory of the Allied Powers will assure the survival of political democracy."

As in the first two debates, the representatives of McGill will again argue for the affirmative in the third. The resolution of this one reads, "Resolved, that successful post-war reconstruction involves the surrender of national sovereignty." This last in the series of debates will be held in Trinity Hall, here at McGill.

Debaters for the second and third debates have not yet been announced by the Society. The four McGill representatives will be decided upon today and announced tomorrow.

Arrangements have been made for Laval University debaters to compete here at McGill on February 26. Although the resolution is not certain, the debaters for the McGill team will be Albert Gaddis and Ernest Skutsky. The debate will be held here at McGill.

Queens University and McGill will meet at an early future date. McGill will then be represented by Don Delvin and Stewart Bross. The first debate will be held at King's.

Gourmet-Producer

STAN EIDINGER, who plays Mr. Kenney, the eccentric Broadway producer, in the Players' Club production of "Out of the Frying Pan." His strenuous efforts as a member of the Escoffiers leave him little time to audition aspiring young actors.

Plumbers Have Special Night

Players' Club Set New Policy with Direct Gesture

The Executive of the Players' Club announced last night that they intend to feature an "Engineers' Night" on one of the three evenings of their forthcoming production, "Out of the Frying Pan." Whether it will be February 19th, 20th, or 21st has not yet been decided.

They feel that enough interest has already been shown by the Plumbers to justify this departure from the usual custom of the club. "Hitherto an Engineers' audience has been regarded as merely a potential disturbance," said a member of the executive last night. "But," he continued, "we think that the play will hold them at least reasonably quiet."

The play was an overwhelming success on Broadway. Its comedy scenes are sufficiently on the broad side to make a strong appeal to that alleged "Artsman's myth," the lowdown Engineering mind. That is not to say, however, that it would have any difficulty in passing the Hays office.

The players have another whole week of rehearsals before "Out of the Frying Pan" begins its run at the end of next week. Tickets are on sale from members of the club as well as in the various faculty buildings. They are selling for 40.

Ford Discusses Wit in Oratory

Talk Designed To Teach Faculty In Discussion

The McGill Debating Union Society will have a former member of its executive as a guest speaker at its second meeting for this year. Mr. Ford, who will be the speaker, will have as his topic "The Use of Humor in Public Speaking." The meeting is to be held tomorrow evening at 8.15 in the Common Room of the Royal Victoria College.

Mr. Ford, who is considered one of Montreal's outstanding humorists is the Director of the Business School at Sir George Williams College. He graduated from the School of Law at McGill, and, while attending this university, took part in many of the Intercollegiate Debates.

This series of meetings has been designed by the Debating Society to promote an interest in public speaking among the students. The lectures are expected to help those students who have difficulty in expressing themselves before large audiences. A member of the executive stated that all students who are interested in improving their public speaking abilities are invited to attend and take advantage of this opportunity to hear professional lecturers.

This series of lectures is a part of a program for increasing interest in debating and public-speaking which the Debating Union Society is putting into effect this year.

Dr. W. Cullis Addresses Women's Meeting About Late Trip to Far East

The Arts and Science Undergraduate Society has announced that elections are to be held for its executive positions during next session. The elections are scheduled to take place on Thursday, February 19th, and the deadline for nominations has been set as 2.00 p.m. on Monday next, February 16th. The offices to be filled at the coming election are those of President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer of the Arts and Science Undergraduates Society. The representative to the Graduate Society, who will also be the permanent President of the class of Arts and Science '42 will be elected concurrently.

Cosmo Club Make Plans

E. Brownstein To Give Talk On Montreal

It has been announced by the officers of the Cosmopolitan Club that a brand new series of talks will be presented beginning next week, dealing with an entirely new angle on the people of foreign lands.

It is planned that these coming discussions, unlike the series now drawing to a close, will lay less emphasis on the geographical beauties of other nations, but will place a great deal of stress on the customs of the inhabitants of these countries. Thus, it is hoped that these talks will cover not only the characteristics of the countryside of that particular nation, but will also deal with the everyday lives of the people in it from the peasant to the plutocrat. Said one of the members of the executive committee: "Our efforts in the future will be directed towards presenting talks covering the folk-lore and even the folk-songs of the inhabitants, to give a general insight into their native spirit."

The committee has further announced that the concluding talk of the old series will be given by Miss Edith Brownstein after the usual luncheon meeting of the Cosmo on Thursday of this week. The talk, it has been stated, will deal with Montreal. Said a member of the committee: "In the opinion of the entertainment committee, this topic will be the most fitting subject on which to end the present series that could possibly have been chosen."

Dr. Cullis concluded her address by predicting more and more difficult times ahead, and she stressed the need for a maximum effort.

Lecturer Describes Comparative Position Of Oriental Women

Dr. Winifred Cullis yesterday addressed a meeting of the Women's Union on the subject of her trip through Japan, China, and other parts of the Far East. The address was sponsored by the Program Committee of the Women's Union. Joan Edward, president of the Program Committee, introduced the speaker.

Dr. Cullis was a Professor of Physiology in the University of London, and has also visited various universities in the United States and Canada. In the course of her talk she mentioned several incidents relating to her experiences in these universities.

Her Eastern trip was due to a request from the government to visit the countries of the Orient with a message to the women of these countries. Her observations of the conditions and the status of women in the various places she visited formed an important part of her address.

Status of Oriental Women

According to Dr. Cullis' account, the status of Japanese women is remarkably low, when compared to Occidental standards. As an illustration of this point, she remarked that she had seen Japanese women in a tram get up to give a seat to a man. In fact, women in Japan were not allowed to attend the lectures which Dr. Cullis delivered during her stay in the country.

She recounted the story of the Japanese occupation of Shanghai from first-hand experience, and mentioned such atrocities as Chinese residents of the city being forbidden to bury their dead.

Oriental Attitude to Britain

The attitudes of these various peoples to Britain and the British people was brought to the attention of the audience by Dr. Cullis' words. The British, she observed, were extremely popular in the Dutch East Indies, and she remarked that to the inhabitants of the islands, "Winston Churchill is a hero." In Japan generally she found the average person "very friendly to the British, but in South Japan the Germans appeared influential and she observed hostility to the British.

Dr. Cullis told of the smuggling in of arms by the Japanese on Dutch ships under cover of diplomatic immunity. She also mentioned that there has been much adverse criticism of the citizens of Singapore as "whiskey-swilling planters," and she asked for understanding and tolerance for these people.

The conditions of the populations of the several countries under observation by Dr. Cullis were also brought into her lecture. She remarked that the Japanese invasion of China had raised food prices to exorbitant levels, making it difficult for the general population to be properly fed. In Japan she found the main civilian population undernourished and over-worked.

Dr. Cullis concluded her address by predicting more and more difficult times ahead, and she stressed the need for a maximum effort.

Around the Globe

End in Sight

The invading Japanese, greatly strengthened by the new landings from across the Johore Strait, beat back the Imperial British defenders from Singapore Island today. London quarters were gloomy over Singapore's grave situation, but authoritative sources were inclined to discount suggestions that the Japanese had infiltrated into the city itself.

Celebes Invaded

Japanese troops have begun landing in southwestern Celebes near Macassar, key port lying 500 bomber miles from Surabaya, the main allied naval base in Java. The British, using guerilla tactics, took a heavy toll of Japanese in the Borneo jungles.

Yanks Arrive in New Zealand

It was reported that American reinforcements had arrived in Wellington, New Zealand. This force was described as the first unit of Admiral Herbert F. Leary's American forces.

Immediate construction of the power facilities outlined in the St. Lawrence waterways agreement is envisaged, President Roosevelt said today. This project, when completed, will generate 2,200,000 horsepower.

RED PUCKMEN TO MEET CLARKSON TECH

Red Shorts

by irene

Lady Luck did not seem to favour McGill, last week-end, but smiled on the Penguins in the Intercollegiate meet at the Seignior Club. Last year the red and white team won the trophy, but somewhere along the line something went wrong this year, but we believe that there will be plenty of chances for the skiers to show just what they can do.

Basketball is another sport in which McGill suffered a defeat over the week-end, this one to the Aggies. It seems that our Red Cross Corps was no match for the well coached team at Macdonald. These girls, we understand, practice about three times a week and have enough players for two teams. Their passing is just down pat—and their guarding, well, we heard one girl say that they must also take boxing lessons.

"There's a big time in the old town tonight," was the theme song last week-end up in Ste. Adele, when the R.V.C. ski-house was filled with our gay coeds. We have heard nothing but the best reports about the marvelous weather and everything, and also that there was nothing wrong with the heating or the plumbing system. There is still plenty of space for more names on the list, but if anyone really wants to go up, they had better sign up right away, as there will be a rush later on.

The coed hockey team will meet the famous Engineers this Friday in their first battle—and we mean battle. From all reports the Plumbers have been waiting for this chance to show their superiority, but time will tell. We were talking to Rex Freeman, and he told us that the Plumbers would play just as hard as they work, to keep the laurels that they won last year, even if they had to use the wrong ends of their hockey sticks. And, by the way, we have an idea that this certain Engineer will be wearing his famous red shirt, and we can assure you he looks mighty handsome in it—what with his beautiful curly black hair, and black eyes.

We have just heard that the Gymkhana will definitely be held on the 27th. of February. It will be very much the same as last year, with all the forces taking part, and the coeds adding a little coloured effect. We are not certain just what the girls will be expected to do, but we do know that it is not too soon to start sewing on those missing buttons, or putting that extra tuck in the waist, to make those red shorts fit perfectly.

Potsdam Invaders to Play At Forum on March 6th

First American Hockey Team to Visit McGill In Two Seasons

The date of the McGill-Clarkson hockey game has finally been set for Friday, March 6. The contest is the second in which the Red all-stars have played this season, the first having been at Loyola, and ending in a 5-1 win for McGill. The men from Potsdam will be in fine fettle, and are liable to put up pretty stiff opposition for the home team.

The Forum ice has been reserved for the occasion, and although the game has been publicised by the Montreal papers the true date is not the fifth as advertised. The M.R.T.B. band may be in attendance, but this is not yet definite. The price of admission is to be determined by the Forum officials, but this will probably be reduced for students.

OLD OPPONENTS

In the pre-war past, the McGill-Clarkson game was an annual event, with the trips alternating between Montreal and Potsdam. The 49th parallel was then no obstacle to itinerant hockey teams, and the University loop was one of the major attractions of the puck season.

The coming game is a step in the direction of re-establishing the old set-up in one form or another. The season is almost ended now, and there may not be time to arrange another game with an American team, but one of the local teams will probably be met toward the end of March.

D.H. Wins Over Dio.

Farlinger And Burroughs Star for D.H.

Yesterday on MacTavish rink the Douglas Hall pucksters downed Diocesan College by a score of 10-4. The game was played without periods, and as there were few subs, the players were pretty well fagged out when the final whistle blew.

F. Farlinger was the high point getter for D.H., netting four points. Burroughs came close behind him with three, while Morgan of Dio. flashed the light three times. Simmons was largely instrumental in keeping the score low by his stellar net minding for the boys from the Hall. Poapeast was third in the scoring with two points to his credit, while Millholend and White each got one goal bringing the total points scored up to 14.

Although the inter-house league got off to a bad start on account of bad weather, the games which were postponed will all be played in the near future and from the support the league is now receiving its inception appears to be a success.

shortly. All who wish to play must enter before the Tournament starts for once the draw has been made no further entries can be made.

F Coy Tops A 18-8 in Puck Meet

Darragh and Macken Star For F Coy

F Coy. plowed the poor A Coy. hockey team under the ice to the tune of 18-8. It was just a mad scramble on the part of the A Coy. squad to try and stop their adversaries from scoring too smashing a victory. To add a little variety to the game there was only a one hour period and the goalie for F Coy. even went out onto the ice and banged in a goal.

It was a rough and tumble game with plenty of thrills and spills. Most of the action took place in front of A Coy's net and so many shots came at him that at times it looked as if there were three-pucks on the ice instead of one. Darragh was the star for F Coy., netting eight goals out of a total of 18. Macken played a wonderful game, dashing in and out between players and making a general nuisance of himself to the dismay of his opponents. He and Darragh were the main factors in giving their team such a staggering score.

VICTOR STARS

Victor, for A Coy., tried with the help of his teammates to erase what appeared to be at the time an embarrassing score and banged in 5 goals out of a total of 8. This proved to no avail however for their faster and more powerful opponents merely moved in and not only evened the score but surpassed it. They could do nothing to stop the avalanche of shots that came their way. There was only one penalty in the whole game and that was given to Joseph for holding the puck.

The line-up was as follows:
For F Coy.: Macken, Parkinson, Darragh, Mence, McCoy, Michael, Joseph.
For A Coy.: Victor, Dodds, Mulligan, Sinclair, Adams, Price.

Cage Finals Draw Close As Ind. Win

Poulson and Kanebe Star for Winners In Net Tilt

With the basketball season drawing to a close the few remaining teams left in the running are closely vying with each other in an effort to clinch the championship. Last night A2 was eliminated from the race, losing its opportunity by conceding the outcome of the game to Ind. 6. The final score of the match was 27-22.

The match itself was closely fought between the two teams. Poulson for the Ind. proved to be the main cog in leading his team to victory by caging the ball seven times he contributed the most towards the final score. Other outstanding players for the Ind. were Kanebe and Andrews. The game besides being hotly contested was also cleanly played throughout, with a noticeable lack of penalty shots.

NOSEWORTHY STARS

A2 for their part put up a tough battle and the game was far from being one-sided. Noseworthy equalled Poulson's record also caging the ball seven times. Had it not been for his accurate and spectacular shooting there might have been a greater margin in the score. The only other important contribution to the A2 score came from Shacter. With the Ind. victory over A2 they will now have the opportunity of meeting the winner of the Ind. 2 and F3 tilt for the championship.

Here's a life! And ain't it grand? I just got a divorce from my old man, And I laughed and laughed at the court's decision, 'Cause they gave him the children, And they weren't even his'n. —Queen's Journal.

It's Time to Call a Halt!

— says Private Thrift

It may be all right in peace time to throw money around. But with war on our hands it's time to call a halt.

We can't fight a total war and live like kings at the same time. We must all watch our spending and save. One of the best ways of saving money is to buy War Savings Certificates regularly. Money invested in War Savings Certificates now, helps directly to win the war... provides you with a useful fund of cash for the future.

The army has made it plain that it will welcome men in these age groups for active service. There have been hints, too, that the call-up age for compulsory service in Canada may be extended to include these age categories.

Reserve Revitalized
 Under Brigadier Ralph Burgess Gibson, assistant chief of the general staff who received a degree in absentia from the University of Toronto 25 years ago, defence headquarters contemplates a more active rôle for the reserve, hopes to shape it into an effective fighting force with specific defence duties in Canada.

Since the war began the reserve has been a straggling last at the army's equipment counter, crowded out by more pretentious customers because of the general equipment shortage. Now, it is understood, the shortage is gradually being overcome and the army promises "modern weapons" will be provided to give the reserve the fighting power it needs.

The fourth dinner meeting of the Phi Epsilon Alpha Society will be held this evening in the Union Grill at 5:15. Professor John Humphrey will give a brief introductory paper on "The Engineer and the Community of the Future," after which the meeting will be devoted to a discussion of the subject. Members are expected to contribute their own ideas as to the probable nature of the Community of the Future and as to the Engineer's place in that community.

Phi Epsilon Alpha is an honorary Engineering Society whose aim is to encourage a more active and more responsible interest in the obligations of the Engineer as a professional man and as a citizen. This year's program has thus far included talks entitled "Sociology and the Engineer" and "Economics and Engineers" by Professors LaViolette and Day respectively. The schedule for the remainder of the session provides for one more dinner meeting, which will be held two weeks from today. The year's activities will close with the annual Dinner and Dance on March 6th.

Members are asked to note particularly the early hour of tonight's meeting and to be on time.

HE FALLS

Alright you big lug, you've finally fallen. You were quite immune to women, you thought. Oh sure! they tell for you, but you took it all in and it didn't bother you a bit. You were elected president of something or other, not only because the majority of boys voted for you, but because there were more girls at the meeting, and you never realized it, but you did a gal a great favor when you asked her to go out coke-guzzling at ten o'clock of an evening. You're not handsome in a movie-hor sort of a way, but jeez, you've certainly got what it takes. You're so-o-o nonchalant about the girls, and they tumble like ten pins in a strike. And it never bothered you—until one month ago.

You saw her at the rink one night; you glanced casually, then looked again. Within ten minutes you had worked an introduction and she was skating with her arm tucked under yours. And so it went. You took her home, and you have been seeing her every night—well almost every night. You realized that the bug had bitten you when you asked her to the Red Cross Formal, and she already had a date. You spent the rest of the evening feeling as if you had swallowed a ton of bricks, and the whole dead weight had settled in the pit of your stomach.

But you were right in there, tho', weren't you? Ain't love wonderful, you thought. The way you look at her! You trip over your own shoe leather when you see her, your eyes pop and gleam brightly, and sometimes your face turns a peculiar shade of green, like on that day she was down at Mrs. Bailey's paying more attention to that goon with the Arts crest on his sweater pocket than to you—and you a forester, gosh, you'd think. . . .
 Well, you'll get over it, for heaven's sake stop grumbling into your shirt collar. Perhaps she likes discussing Chaucer and you didn't know whether he was the First King of Bohemia, or Cleopatra's heart pumper. Dust off your eyeballs and look around. You lucky man! the femmes are all after you again so don't mutter "Phooey to women." We know better you'll fall again, but definitely.

KAPOODLE.

(With apologies to Mr. Salter.)

As I walked into the mathematics class, my mind was in a turmoil. Eight o'clock on a Monday morning is not the best time in which to straighten out one's housekeeping budget. But no matter how hard I tried to forget the whole bother—some business, I could still see that page in our "expense" book with those two columns that would not balance. Every Sunday morning my roommate and I settle our accounts, but for once we were stumped. Of course, five cents isn't a very large amount of money, but then it was the principle of the thing that bothered me, and anyway, we couldn't even split five cents evenly. I gave but scant attention to the graph which the professor was discussing, although once I did forget my worries long enough to contemplate the numerous graphs I might draw up on the cost of different foods. Take eggs, now. They have steadily gone up in price since September until a few weeks ago, when they dropped slightly. Then as I again transferred my thoughts to the search for the missing cents, I was distracted from my problem to note that my answer for a simple addition necessary to obtain a certain formula from the graph was different from that given by other members of the class. Surely 62 and 23 are 85. Why, those figures had occurred in our expense book the previous day, and I had checked and re-checked them. But wait—of course, the sum of two and three is five! It is their product that is six. Therein lay my mistake. Three cheers for higher mathematics. My mind would no longer be haunted by visions of elusive cents slipping out of my grasp.

In a very light-hearted mood I went forth at the end of the hour to obtain a little culture in the English class. The professor began by giving us an outline of the section involved in a study of writing. As he mentioned them—the mechanics of writing, the virtues of writing, the graces of writing, different style of writing, and the art of writing—there flashed through my mind a parallel study of feminine personality. Under the mechanics would be included such minor points as details of dress and make-up. The for writing; brevity is the soul of wit in every field, variety—men would probably exchange the word inconsistency, suspense—always a good line, activity—it's best to keep virtues would not be unlike those the men on the hop, and symmetry—there's not much can be done here, although they claim military drill has its advantages. As to the graces of femininity, they would likewise be similar to those for writing, for suggestion is the key-note of successful female diplomacy, and sex appeal in a pretty girl is not so very far removed from sense appeal in a writer. Styles of female allure are quite numerous and easily recognized from the young innocent to the bored sophisticate. As in writing, it is the art which is the important consideration, so in personality, for although in the former words and ideas require careful attention, as do clothes and make-up in the latter, it is the way in which they are presented to their audiences upon which depends their success.

It was not until the middle of the following hour that my interest was again aroused. The lecture dealt with Bismarck's diplomacy which was based upon the principle of keeping in the good graces of the other Powers. It occurred to me that there was a lesson for every girl. When boy-friend number one called to visit and boy-friend number two was expected, or when they both piled for dates on the same evening, why even Dorothy Dix could give no better advice than that obtained from a study of Bismarck's methods of handling two jealous nations.

Here my pursuit of knowledge was interrupted by the necessity to go home and prepare lunch, but prompt at one o'clock I returned to wrestle with the problems met in the world of chemistry. Before long I had concocted a brown mixture closely resembling fudge except that it was creamy and smooth, whereas my candy was always sugary. However, by carefully observing temperatures and procedure, I hope to obtain better results in the future. I picked up several other helpful hints in the course of the afternoon which will be invaluable in my cooking enterprises. If a liquid is hot it is very likely that the container will also be hot and not bear handling. Further, if one neglects to follow instructions and omits one or two reagents or ingredients, the results will be other than successful, and finally, if different containers are used for each process and none are ever washed, a point is reached (usually an inconvenient point) at which there remain no clean ones. Yes, university knowledge is very useful!

MRTB, COTC Not Under New Rule

Other Reservists Now Eligible for Military Service

It was announced at Ottawa, last week, that the members of reserve units in this country would no longer be exempt from compulsory military service as they have been in the past. This order would, however, probably not affect the C.O.T.C. or other compulsory military training units organized by Canadian universities. The M.R.T.B. is included in the latter group, along with other similar units.

A defence headquarters spokesman said, "The status of these students under the new regulations is a matter of policy now being worked out" but added that it was not likely that they would be affected by the rulings. "An announcement," he said, "will be made within the next few days."

The students in the various universities who are taking military training, have, up to now, been considered part of the reserve army and the question of their status arose as a result of this ruling. Officials are, however, satisfied with the present system, and so no immediate change is expected.

A CLASSIC ON CLASSICS

A Freshette asked me the other day, as people will, "Why are you taking Classics?" I was quite prepared for the half-concealed sneer which almost invariably accompanies that question, but to my amazement I had to admit to myself that here there was no sneer. Was it a spark of admiration I saw in her face? I was not loth to think so, at any rate, and consequently I was eager to oblige her. But she had asked me a question—an awkward question—one I should have settled a long time ago. It was a delicate situation, for if I admitted my own bewilderment I ran the risk of destroying that flattering interest. So I assured her that it was my surpassing interest in languages—with a guilty feeling all the time that this probably wasn't the real reason at all. She went on her way presumably undisillusioned, and I went on my way in my usual puzzled state of mind. The partial falsehood I had imposed on a young and trusting nature kept rubbing on my conscience, however, so I was finally driven to writing this.

In short, I sat down and began to figure out just why I am taking the course I am—namely, Honours in Classics. Passing quickly over the commoner rationalized justifications with which I usually palliate my not infrequent qualms and misgivings, I recalled the history of the thing. Everyone had wanted me to take something else—math, or science or engineering or medicine. Maybe I wanted to be different. I was curious too, as I knew next to nothing about Classics. Sheer perversity and idle curiosity—these were the things which seemed to have been the prime factors in my choice of a life work. This was not an encouraging beginning to my investigation, and I felt perhaps I had better retreat behind my rationalizations. However, I went on.

There were other motives too; little ulterior influences that I won't go into now. They might be just too interesting. But it is sufficient that I found little ground for supposing that I had made a rational and logical choice. Then I thought of the past two and a half years, and decided on the whole they had been good years. I thought of my professors, and decided that I was glad and privileged to know them, albeit I had lost some of the blind reverence of my Freshman days.

Myself when young did eagerly frequent Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument About it and about, but evermore Came out by the same door that I went in.

Well, then, if I was going to come out the same door anyway, maybe curiosity and interest were as good reasons as any for choosing which door I went in. This thought from old Omar made me feel much better. I began to wonder if, lacking the wisdom of an angel I could have made a better choice. With a brief reflection on the further conclusions drawn by this same Omar I returned to my Latin essay.

STUDENTS' LIFE IN FRANCE.

Most people think of student life in France as something past and dead, but to those who have known and loved it, it will live forever, just as they knew it before the war. It is not for that reason that I shall speak of it in the present tense now.

At the University of Besancon, France, there are two types of students: the French students, who take courses in Lettres (which corresponds roughly to our Arts course), Droit (Law), Sciences, and Medicine—and who work very hard, and the foreigners, who are there to learn French and are only too eager to take the professors' advice when they say that it is better to go out and speak with French people and to go to the cinema, than to read books, which they can do in their own country. Of course there are foreigners who take the courses for the French people, and for them the task is obviously even harder than it is for the French. There are generally some fifty foreigners taking the Cours pour les Etrangers—from Great Britain, Holland, Hungary, Poland, the United States—from nearly every country in the world, even from Canada.
